

REPRESENTATIONS OF GENDER AND FEMALE SUBJECTIVITY IN CONTEMPORARY IRISH DRAMA BY WOMEN

Dr. Mária Kurdi
University of Pécs

Contribution to Scholarship:

Departing from the assumption that female-authored drama has developed its own strategies or revitalized older ones, this book traces dramatization of the specific female experience on the contemporary Irish stage. This work also rescues from obscurity plays written by lesser known authors.

From the Foreword:

“Both Irish theatre and Irish scholarship owe a huge debt to the analysis of Mária Kurdi and the singular way she places the dramatic work nationally and internationally. Kurdi’s world view and perspectives bring into play a range of critical and discursive strategies and sensibilities that are uniquely combined and interdigitated, but also groundbreakingly invaluable.”

From a Peer Review:

“Scholarly, lively, and accessible, this book is destined to become a standard reference for all students of modern Irish drama. . .”
